

SECOND CIRCULAR

XXIII Trobades Científiques de la Mediterrània XXIII Scientific Mediterranean Meetings

Supernovae: light in the darkness

Maó, Menorca (Spain)
3rd – 5th October, 2007

Presentation

Every year, just at the end of the summer, the Section of Physics and Technique of the “Institut Menorquí d' Estudis” and the “Societat Catalana de Física” organize the “Trobades Científiques de la Mediterrània” with the support of diverse academic institutions.

The primary goal consists of providing a frame of interchange of experience and knowledge on a current research topic in the field of Physics. Aside from constituting a scientific forum, these encounters also try to facilitate the relationship and communication between scientists and technicians working in similar areas. The 2007 edition is devoted to stellar explosions and related topics.

Scientific programme

The programme is composed by 5 invited reviews (50 min + 10 min), a number of contributed talks (25 min + 5 min) and posters (see the conference website). Notice that the number of contributed talks is limited, do not wait for the last moment!

Invited reviews

- Thermonuclear Supernovae (F. Roepke)
- Gravitational Supernovae (H.T. Janka)
- Gamma Ray Bursts (E. Waxman)
- Cosmological implications (R. Pain)
